

DIABETES-FRIENDLY SNACKING

WITH PECANS

HARNESS THE POWER OF PECAN PAIRINGS

If you have diabetes, you know that food choices are a vital part of managing your blood glucose (aka blood sugar) levels. Balanced snacking is a powerful way to help manage blood glucose. Carbohydrate foods naturally increase blood glucose levels. Pair pecans with carbohydrates because they:

- Contain only 4 grams of carbohydrate per serving, which is lower than other tree nuts
- Provide 3 grams of fiber per serving, which keeps you feeling full
- Are delicious and heart-healthy*
- Have 3 grams of plant-based protein per serving

DID YOU KNOW?

One serving of pecans delivers 11% of your daily value (DV) of dietary fiber, which may support satiety, blood sugar control, and digestive health throughout the day.

KNOW YOUR PORTIONS

- Being mindful of portion size is the first step in creating a balanced snack.
- Enjoy up to 3 snacks per day, following your hunger cues.
- Aim for 1 serving of pecans and 1-2 servings of a carbohydrate food per snack:

1 serving of pecans =  19 halves =  1/4 cup pieces

CARBOHYDRATE FOOD SERVINGS

1 serving = ~15 grams carbohydrate

1/2

cup cooked
oatmeal

3

cups air-popped popcorn

1

yogurt

ENJOY A HANDFUL, NOT A CAN-FUL

Mindfully munch on pecans by:

- Pre-measuring your pecans before snacking rather than eating from the package
- Enjoying each pecan one at a time to savor the naturally sweet flavor and buttery texture of the nut
- Trying to minimize distractions such as working or watching TV while snacking, as these distractions may lead to mindless eating
- Following your hunger cues and snacking when you feel hungry and stopping when you feel full
